

A Clean Opening

The first paragraph opens the chapter and should remain flush because the chapter heading is the semantic opener.

The second paragraph is ordinary prose and should use the novel paragraph rhythm: first-line indent, no blank paragraph gap.

| A quoted line should interrupt indentation context without becoming the chapter opener.

The paragraph after the quote should still be controlled by semantic context rather than page position.